

Jerome Sother // Crocodile Tears

With a good dose of irony, self reflection and a look around himself, his surroundings, the people who matter in life, the indoors, the out, the rain and the new fridge, Jerome Sother gives us a humorous glance into life. Sometime tragic and bordering the ridiculous as the image of a man (himself) lying under a couch in pants and a woman (wife? Friend?) about to sit down, or get up, a television he's watching in the foreground, a baby, death and a collection of milk cartons.. Foreword by Robert Frank.
